Reese and Visiting BEEP Professors Encourage Students to Aim High

Mr. Isiah Reese, third row, far right with visiting professors and their student guides.

Career Services held their annual Black Executive Exchange Program Career Fest Assembly on Thursday morning. Mr. Isiah Reese, Sumter native and head director of World Wide Marketing for Microsoft Corporation, was the featured speaker.

Mr. Reese shared lessons for launching career success from his internationally published speech, "Ready, Aim, Shoot."

He described "Ready" as building a basic foundation that includes STEM, reading, writing and listening skills, being firm in what you want to accomplish, pursuing it and creating a career and a personal mission statement. Reese advised, "Only align yourself with those who are in agreement with your mission statement."

Reese explained that "Aim" is a matter of looking at a target and asking the necessary question, "What is required to get to the goal?" This means aiming for high grades during college, building on the undergraduate degree and being a life-long learner.

The last component, "Shoot" involves visualizing yourself where you want to be taking the necessary steps to get there and give back to the community.

The program included an informative question and answer session with visiting professionals from business, education, and the corporate world. The visiting professionals emphasized the need for students to prepare for a global world.

The visiting professors included Dr. Constance Lane, Mr. Charles Kearse, II, Mr. Kenneth Smith, Sr., Mr. Samuel Myers, Mr. Joe Funchess, Dr. Annette West, Ms. Von Grethen Nelson, Ms. Maria Newton-Ta' Bon and Ms. Aviva Seabrook.

Academic Dean Dr. Leroy Stagers gave closing remarks in the absence of President Richardson, who was away from the college on official business. Stagers thanked Mr. Reese for an outstanding presentation and encouraged the students to take advantage of the great opportunity to engage and gain wisdom and knowledge from the visiting professors.

On behalf of the college, Dean Stagers presented Mr. Kearse with the Distinguished Visiting Professor Award.
