Attorney Sabb Directs Students to Achieve More

Attorney Sabb and President Richardson.

Honors Day Students with Sabb and the President.

Attorney Ronnie Alan Sabb delivered a moving address at the Honors Day Convocation on Thursday morning. His words motivated students to go beyond where they are to where they need to go.

He informed students that despite the fact many may discourage achievement and "snicker" at their efforts to strive for success, "achievement is still significant. It is the core of all those things that represent progress, not only here and nationally but in the world."

Second, Sabb said, "Be willing to accept criticism with some level of warmth. Criticism is a healthy thing if it challenges you." He did caution them to have a good filtering system for criticism. "Know what to accept and know what to discard."

As he continued, Sabb confessed that he was moving away from his notes to share what was on his heart. Wanting to clearly convey that challenges will be on the road to opportunity, he shared personal obstacles he faced on the way to acquiring a college degree and later obstacles that arose after graduation, as well as those encountered at law school. He noted these "stumbling blocks are stepping stones. Do not let them hinder you. Know who you are and whose you are." Sabb advised students to make tough choices and be willing to listen and engage with those who are older and more experienced. "Allow your territory to be enlarged". He enlightened them that it is ok to accept help but "have the fortitude to move beyond to a position where you can be of help to someone else."

He also challenged students to move from thinking about the short term to preparing for the long term; to develop a plan for the years to come. He encouraged them to do as he did when the challenges came. He said he had a God-conversation. "If God does not say yes to your request, he will say yes to something better for you."

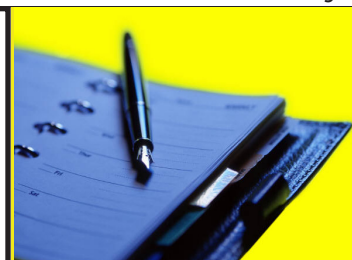

To all students, those with honors and those who have yet to achieve honors he instructed, "Be willing to challenge yourselves. Do not let the fear of failure stop you from going beyond."
